5. Page 27– “4. RISKS” – “4.1 Risk factors” – “I. General risk factors”

The following paragraphs shall be added after “(o) China market securities risk”:

“(p) Investment concentration risk

Constituent Funds (or through their respective underlying funds) which invest in a relatively small number of investments or issuers may experience a more volatile net asset value as a result of this concentration of holdings relative to funds that diversifies across a larger number of investments or issuers.

“(q) Eurozone risk

The performance of the investment will be closely tied to the economic, political, regulatory, geopolitical, market, currency or other conditions in the Eurozone and could be more volatile than the performance of more geographically diversified investment. In light of the ongoing concerns on the sovereign debt risk of certain countries within the Eurozone, the relevant investments in the region may be subject to higher volatility, liquidity, currency and default risks. Any adverse events, such as the credit downgrade of a sovereign or the exit of European Union members from the Eurozone, may have a negative impact on the value of the relevant investment.

“(r) Derivatives risk

Derivatives are financial contracts whose value is derived from the value of an underlying asset, reference rate or index. While the prudent use of derivatives can be beneficial, derivatives also involve risks different from, and, in certain cases, greater than, the risks associated with more traditional investments; and exposure to derivatives may lead to significant loss by the relevant fund.”
